

Indiano & Williams joins forces with Wilkofsky, Friedman, Karel & Cummins to sue insurance companies for Hurricane Maria claims.

Hurricane Maria devastated Puerto Rico. Now the insurance companies are refusing to pay fair value for covered claims. Insurance policy holders will be forced to sue these insurance companies in order to recover a fair value for these damages. The insurance companies often use their position of strength to discourage claims and litigation. Issues of coverage and the quantification of damages will be central to these cases.

Indiano & Williams P.S.C., with its fully bilingual attorneys and extensive litigation experience in federal and local (state) courts in Puerto Rico, will pursue these insurance companies when they try to deny and avoid paying on valid covered claims. Our co-counsel has extensive experience in similar types of hurricane-related litigation and claims; including Hurricane Sandy. Together, we will vigorously defend the interest of policy holders.

Attached is a brochure that highlights these attorneys and their accomplishments.
